NEW! Special Education Employment Laws & Legal Issues

Half-day workshop
Includes materials and continental breakfast
Qualifies for 3.5 CEUs

Designed for

Human resources and special education directors and professionals, lead negotiators, chief business officials and risk managers.

Topics

Personnel and labor issues; liability; case load requirements; credentialing; employee discipline; employee assignments and job descriptions; individualized education program (IEP) creation, implementation and compliance; finances; litigation.

Description

Special education staff frequently are confronted by issues related to caseloads, credentialing, employee discipline, employee assignments and job descriptions, and fiscal and liability implications within the landscape of IEP creation, implementation and compliance. This interactive workshop will explore the most common and universal legal and practical questions encountered when special education issues intersect with personnel and labor issues, necessitating special handling and increased awareness with respect to staff who may be experienced in one area, but require extra assistance and guidance in another.

You'll leave the workshop with real-world examples of special education teacher discipline for failure to comply with IEP processes, settlement implications related to school finance and employee assignments, negotiated job descriptions for special education-related positions, and litigation scenarios of the vast and complicated issues arising in this landscape.
